Re: Sportsheadz - Digital Health Check Tool

To: ALLIANCE Hockey Member Associations

As many of you are aware, MBSportsWeb has been a longtime partner with ALLIANCE Hockey and the Member Associations.

MBSportsWeb has recently merged with the company Sportsheadz and are offering free web-based and app-based Digital Health Check tool.

The digital health check tool features the questions which are asked on the OHF screening questionnaire and again, have been replicated in both a web-based version of the form and as an app-based version. The web-based version is available at <https://health.sportsheadz.com> (to use it you would need to be on a roster). They have optimized the workload for Associations in creating these rosters to the point where they can accommodate an Association the size of Cambridge for example, in as little as an hour or two.

The intent of the tool is that parents (or players who are of age) complete their own health screenings. Coaches or managers can also quickly view summaries of screening results for their events, or more detailed reports on screening results for a single event.

The Sportsheadz App is available for both iOS and Android, and parents can complete the screening directly within the App. Below are video links showing examples of the process for both a 'failed screening', as well as a 'passed screening' (from a parent's perspective):

The tool also includes the option to enter phone numbers for roster members, which means that if an Association wishes to use the results of their screening to track attendance at an event, then it can also be used for contact tracing (the PHUs require phone numbers not email addresses for contact tracing).
